Charter Schools Are Public Schools

The public education system in New York City is enormous; there are over one million students to educate! For this reason, the City has different kinds of public schools for parents to choose from. Charter schools are a special type of public school. They are free and open to all New York City students, including multilingual learners and immigrants, and do not require any special entrance exams.

Charter Schools Serve All Students

Charter schools welcome all students, including students with disabilities, multilingual learners, and immigrants. Charter schools do not select students based on academic background or tests. Instead, students are chosen through a random lottery after parents fill out a short application. There are currently 260 charter schools in NYC, educating approximately 126,000 students in all grades and in all five boroughs.

What Supports Do Multilingual Learners Receive?

Charter schools are required by law to communicate with their families in a language that the families understand. They are also required to provide multilingual learners with research-based supports that help them learn English and the same content as all other students in the school. Charter schools aim to ensure that all students' needs are met by offering, among other things, smaller class sizes, co-teaching, more time for reading and math, a "full-inclusion" setting, and a longer school day and year.

Charters Help Multilingual Learners Achieve

The multilingual learner students enrolled in NYC charter schools score proficient in Math and English Language Arts (ELA) at higher rates than citywide averages. For example, last year English language learners at charters were 30.8% proficient in math, as opposed to 18.9% for students in district schools.

How to Apply to NYC Charter Schools

There are three ways to apply to NYC charter schools. Applications are accepted between December 1 and April 1.

- 1. Use the Common Online Charter School Application, which is available in ten languages, to apply to multiple schools at once! Visit: nyccharterschools.org/apply for details.
- 2. Visit the school's website directly to download its application or to apply online.
- 3. Stop by the school in person to pick up an application or call the school and ask them to mail you an application.

When there are more student applications than available seats, charter schools are required to hold lotteries to randomly select students for admission. Students whose names are not selected will be added to the school's waiting list or may be admitted as seats become available in the future.
