Charters Schools Are for All Students

Did you know that charter schools are free public schools open to all New York City students? Today, there are more than 400 campuses serving over 150,500 students, including English language learners and students with special needs. Charter schools don't select students based on their academic background. Parents simply fill out a short application and students are admitted through a random lottery. Charters schools serve students from Pre-K through high school and are located in all five boroughs of NYC.

Charters Prepare Students for College & Career

Studies show that New York City has one of the highest performing charter school sectors in the country. The most recent available testing data shows charter school students consistently passed the state academic tests at higher rates than their district counterparts, especially Black and Latino students.

Charters Innovate!

Charter schools operate independent of the NYC Department of Education. This allows them to be more flexible in the ways that they run their schools, design their academic programs and hire staff. Many charter schools not only emphasize the core subjects of English and math, but also offer arts, science and language programs. Charter schools often use innovative approaches to learning, such as longer school days and a longer school year, which contribute to students' success in preparation for college and career.

"I love the constant access that I have to my 6-year-old daughter's teachers at her charter school. I truly feel like a partner in my child's education – I am always welcome to observe classrooms and participate in student activities to stay connected."

- Valerie Babb, Harlem Link Charter School parent
